The Hills Facility & the Real Life Network

In 2022 a team of individuals recovered (harvested on a volunteer basis) > 3,000lbs of produce - potatoes, carrots, zucchini, cucumber, garlic, squash and tomatoes across 4 small farms in 2022. This produce would have otherwise been left to waste. The participants also saved > 18,000 lbs of alfalfa and timothy hay from going to waste, for consumption by livestock on an ethical farm which is striving for excellence in the poultry and pork market. That produce and meat was later added to the menu at the the 108 Hills Facility and will continue to grow into a Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program facilitated by the RLN.

Social Impact & The Real Life Network

Testimonials from RLN participants who created & connected at “Garden Parties”:

“Helping local farmers in their beautiful fields with friends and family was a lot of fun.”

*“I learned more about the ins and outs of food and also put fresh organic vegetables on my table.
Yum!Yum!”*

“It was fabulous seeing children come out to lend a hand and learn that food comes from the ground with all the processes it takes to go from seed to vegetables. They had a great time in the fields and sunshine.”

“In a way the Garden Parties helped me out of a social slump that I didn’t even know I was in. It was an uplifting experience”

The Real Life Network : technology to activate community & participation.

The documentary “Social Dilemma” was released in 2020 - this documentary was produced by a number of the the visionaries and original developers of the now existent “social media metaverse”. In the documentary these experts and former employees examining how the algorithms and structure of social media's design nurtures addiction to maximize profit and manipulate people's views, emotions, and behavior - spreading misinformation.

The Real Life Network emerged as a result of the direct failure (if not outright tyranny) of Social Media negatively impacting the fabric of our community. The Real Life Network is built on a brand new equitable, socially minded, technological innovation called ADAM.

“Autonomous Data And Management”. ADAM is a technological innovation which stems many of the negative social issues as roughly described in the Social Dilema, issues of for profit data harvesting, addiction and the corruption of exponential technological expansion.

The Real Life Network is a network media and communications system which ultimately connects people through technology, into real life situations and opportunities where they can work together towards positive developments in their local communities.

Our early stage research and testing indicates the RLN concept facilitates people coming together across different backgrounds, ethnicities, beliefs. Instead of engaging in un-productive behaviour such as protesting this or that on the streets, spreading mis-information (conspiracy theories and rumours) or arguing and ranting and engaging on other generally destructive communications on Facebook - members of the community are now leveraging technology in order to participate in re-building the social groundwork of their community.

The Real Life Network : activating community development

The RLN to date has activated projects and participation in the following development sectors at a community level:

1. Vocational support & skill development
2. Legal support & justice systems
3. Sustainable homes & community building
4. Facilities management & construction systems
5. Ethical food & therapeutic systems
6. Security & emergency systems
7. Ethical agriculture & organic systems
